

Alfred the Automated Server

Are you tired of waiting in those long lines at Starducks? Are you tired of dealing with incompetent cashiers at TacoHell? Are you having trouble thinking up stupid topics of conversation to keep your date amused while waiting for your server to finish his smoke break and give you the menus? Are you sick of holding a lighted hockey puck while waiting in line at a restaurant for a table?

Well wait no longer, introducing Alfred the Automated Server! Alfred uses Bluetooth technology to greet you as soon as you walk in the door at the restaurant. Alfred will assign you a table, take your order, and tabulate your bill. No more waiting forever for food, Alfred is sure to increase food ordering and production efficiency in any food service establishment.

Take Starducks for instance, why wait in line for your skinny semi-dry Venti Cappuccino with one equal. Just walk in have a seat and Alfred immediately contacts your cell phone. You punch in your order, it's tabulated, you receive the total, and your order is queried at the barista's console. Once the barista's done with your coffee, Alfred contacts you, you pay, and pick up your coffee. The same can be said for any fast food restaurant. No need to wait in line, when your order is ready, Alfred will contact you.

Where Alfred really shines is in the more formal restaurant setting. If you have to wait in line, Alfred will contact you when your table is ready. No more lighted hockey puck. You'll be able to order without having to worry about the server who never gives you the attention that you deserve. It's alright, because Alfred will give you his complete and undivided attention. Don't like automated servers, well that's ok Alfred always gives you the option to call a human server. Imagine not having to yell out garçon. It's all done with Bluetooth and Alfred. Alfred will also tabulate your data give you your check, and signal the human server when you're ready to pay.

Alfred the Automated Server is the answer to every restaurant manager's woes. It's really tough getting and keeping good help these days. With Alfred your worries are over, Alfred is never late for work, he never takes smoke breaks in fact, Alfred never breaks at all. Alfred will never ask for a raise; in fact, Alfred will never ask for money or a health plan for that matter.